

About the Presenter:

Darlene E. Garcia-Johnson, BSW, MS has a bachelor's degree in Social Work from California University of PA and a master's degree in Varying Exceptionalities from Nova Southeastern University. She recently completed a second master's degree in Professional Counseling at Liberty University. She has served in a variety of roles in the human services and counseling fields, including direct services with adolescents in residential and therapeutic setting, as a county case manager for children & youth services, and has held supervisory positions in foster care & adoption services and alternative education. Her professional and academic background enjoin a systems approach that convenes all stakeholders in a child's development, impacting the lives of children and youth with special education, physical, and mental health needs by enhancing the relationships between families, the community, educational systems, legal, and social service organizations.
